(b) whether it is also a fact that Pakistan with the help of embankments and spurs, changes the flow of the river towards India, which is the main reason of the deluge;

(c) if so, the reasons for India's embankments/spur becoming unsuccessful in stemming the tide of the river towards Pakistan; and

(d) the steps to be taken by Government in this direction?

THE MINISTER OF WATER RESOURCES (SHRI JANESHWAR MISHRA): (a) River Ravi flows almost all along Indo-Pak Border before entering Pakistan. Floods in the river Ravi cause servere damages to flood protection/river training works and culturable land in India.

(b) The Pakistan has, over the years, constructed flood embankments and spurs on its side of the river. These works under certain hydraulic and morphological conditions divert the flow of the river towards the other bank in the Indian Territory.

(c) and (d) The State of Punjab has been constructing counter protective works to keep the river away from the Indian border according to their recommendations of the Committee on special remedial works for flood protection of embankments on rivers Ravi and Sutlej. About Rs. 1.5 crores is earmarked every year as Central Loan Assistance to State of Punjab for construction of these counter protective works on river Ravi and Sutlej. As this amount is not sufficient the State undertakes balance works depending upon the priority and resources available with them. Efforts are being made to provide more funds to expedite the works.
